Resolution 2000-2001-2 Faculty Teaching and Learning Evaluation in the Tenure Process
Dr. Ady Milman explained the changes the Undergraduate Policy and Curriculum Committee made after the resolution was returned to the UPCC from the Faculty Senate in January. The UPCC had a significantly lengthy discussion on this resolution. The following revised resolution was approved to go forward again to the Steering Committee.

There was extensive discussion of the exact wording of the resolution. A motion was made and seconded to include the word “may” at the end of the last sentence. Dr. Milman stated that the wording had been discussed at the UPCC meeting. The word
"may" was excluded for several reasons. Dr. Velez agreed with Dr. Milman that all wording had been discussed and approved as written. The motion was not approved.

Additional discussion included issues of use of evaluation in promotion and tenure, the forms of evaluation already in use in various units, how often evaluation (other than the Student Perception of Instruction) occurs, who does additional evaluation and concern about lack of protection to faculty. The reality of evaluations, peer reviews, chair reviews, and policies of the current system need to be recognized. It was also stated that any kind of process would be open to political abuse. Dr. Milman stated that this resolution dealt mostly with promotion and not tenure. Dr. Ida Cook moved to have the phrase “in the tenure process” removed. The motion was seconded and unanimously approved. A friendly amendment was made to change the title of the resolution to: Evaluation of Faculty Teaching Effectiveness. The amendment was approved unanimously.

Revised resolution:
Resolution 2000-2001-2 Evaluation of Faculty Teaching Effectiveness
The Faculty Senate strongly recommends that, while the Student Perception of Instruction form will continue to be the instrument for evaluating faculty teaching effectiveness, other instruments such as peer evaluation, teaching portfolios, or other measures also be used.
